Attention is called to the emphasis apparently placed on natural sciences. The only other faculties featuring as prominently are those of history and philology; the latter usually is important for the study of the local language of the particular republic sponsoring the university.

2. In addition to numerous correspondence courses, the University of Kharkov provides evening courses in the physics and mathematics, geology and geography, philology, and history faculties.

the following universities refer to their work at war evacuation addresses in 1944. In 1945 they were noted as having returned to their normal locations; it is probably reasonable to assume therefore that their activities may have undergone some expansion.

Leningrad	returned from Saratov
Minsk	returned from Moscow
Odessa	returned from Bairam-Ali (Turkmen)
Petrozavodsk	returned from Siktivkar (Komi ASSR)

5. There are extensive additional facilities for higher education in all branches, especially in scientific and technical fields, in institutes maintained by the Academy of Sciences of the USSR and by various ministries.
